

Well, it all started generations ago. Jack and his family lived in a small cabin in a secluded section of Southeastern Nebraska. Times were tough for Jack and his family as food was hard to come by, and the winters were bitter cold. Jack was a farmer by trade, growing corn, wheat, barley, and a plant that most folks had never heard of, Hops. While most folks from that part of the country were partial to stills and moonshine, Jack had a passion for that golden liquid that he cooked up, Beer. Jack dedicated a small corner of his farm to growing that Hop plant, along with some other plants that he liked to incorporate into his beer.

Jack's wife Sarah, always knew where to find him, as he seemed to be more interested in that small plot of dirt in the corner than he was with the rest of the farm. Jack toiled day and night, working on finding the right combination of ingredients for that perfect batch of beer.

Since Jack was always working on his beer, Sarah spent her time cooking, and grew to be known as the best cook in all of Nebraska. Sarah was a perfectionist, and the meals that she created became famous throughout the land.

Omaha Jack's is dedicated to Sarah and Jack, a woman that had a passion for food, and a man that had a passion for beer. All of us here at Omaha Jack's truly hope that you thoroughly enjoy our carefully prepared food, our handcrafted beer, and our special kind of friendship that we call "Omahospitality".
